The mission of our journal is to spread MI to those who are interested in learning more about its philosophy, its underlying academic research, as well as, to establish a good interaction with those dentists who already use MI concepts in their daily dental practice. For that reason, general dental practitioners are most welcome to submit clinical reports, based on their practice experiences and to share their views and opinion with an increasing MI audience worldwide.

Minimum Intervention (MI) is based on three pillars: the best understanding of the disease etiology and prognosis; early disease detection and early disease treatment. In the second edition of the JMID the reader is invited to discover further important aspects of MI in Dentistry related to cariology. Some of these concern materials and techniques for dental caries diagnosis and treatment.
