For that reason, the main objective of the JMID is to facilitate the practitioner's comprehension of clinical problems, by giving them the opportunity to publish their own cases.

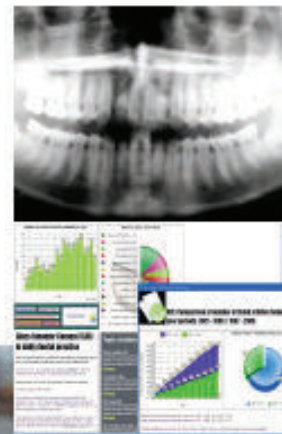

We, from the JMID, would be happy to be the bridge between you and other dentists by publishing your own expertise and experience in Minimum Intervention.

S. Leal

Welcome to our new issue of the JMID! There are many things happening in dentistry in different fields and at the same time. Dentists are sometimes, challenged by their patients concerning the best material, the best intervention or even the best approach to deal with a specific oral health problem. If he/she wants to be updated, many good publications may be available, and therefore they should be checked. Nevertheless, most of these data are related to academic research, in which the methodological aspects are not always easy to be understood by the clinician.
